

Caregiver Self-Assessment*

| Signs of burnout/fatigue                                | Never | Sometimes | Frequently | Always |
|---|-------|-----------|------------|--------|
| I can't fall asleep or I frequentlywake up.         |       |           |            |        |
| I have a lack of energy during the day.                 |       |           |            |        |
| l eat too much or too little.                           |       |           |            |        |
| l am sick more often (flus, colds,headaches).       |       |           |            |        |
| I feel impatient or I am easily agitated.               |       |           |            |        |
| I feel guilty that I am not doing enough.               |       |           |            |        |
| I have trouble concentrating on everyday simple tasks.  |       |           |            |        |
| I am becoming more forgetful.                           |       |           |            |        |
| l stopped doing activities l used to find enjoyable.    |       |           |            |        |
| I am more socially isolated from my friends and family. |       |           |            |        |
| I feel sad or depressed.                                |       |           |            |        |
| l feel anxious or worried.                              |       |           |            |        |
| I have lost interest in doing things.                   |       |           |            |        |

If you checked "Frequently" or "Always" for any of the above, then it's time to seek help from a healthcare provider, or your local health and social service network–because you have to take care of yourself, too!

Building a support network is one of the most important ways to prevent burnout. It can be helpful to do an inventory of professional and family/friend supports that can help you with care tasks.

Get more information and resources for caregivers at TevaCaregivers.com.

* Not intended as a substitute for medical advice. Please consult your doctor if you are experiencing a health problem.

